

Declaración de La Haya

Adoptada y proclamada
por los fundadores de la Organización para los Estándares Digitales en la ciudad de La Haya, el día 21 de mayo del año 2008

Considerando que hace cerca de 60 años la Declaración Universal de los Derechos Humanos estableció como leyes internacionales las siguientes libertades y derechos:

1. El derecho a no ser discriminado frente a ley o gobierno (Artículo 2, Artículo 7).
2. El derecho a circular libremente dentro de las fronteras de cada Estado (Artículo 13.1).
3. El derecho a participar en el gobierno de su país (Artículo 21.1).
4. El derecho al acceso igualitario a la función pública (Artículo 21.2).

Considerando que estos derechos y libertades son hoy aceptados por todo gobierno democrático y otorgados por las constituciones de la mayoría de los estados;

Considerando que todos los países se dirigen, aunque con diferentes velocidades y puntos de partida, hacia una sociedad en la que la plena y efectiva participación en gobierno y sociedad, así como el acceso a los servicios públicos, la educación y las oportunidades, son cada día más dependientes del acceso a las comunicaciones electrónicas globales;

Considerando, más específicamente, que:

- Servicios, recursos e información gubernamentales se proveen cada día más de forma electrónica en vez de físicamente;
- La libertad de opinión y asociación se ejercen cada vez más de forma electrónica en vez de presencial;
- Internet y el Web representan una vía sin precedentes hacia la paridad de oportunidades y educación para todos los ciudadanos del mundo;

Considerando que, en la transición a la sociedad digital en que nos encontramos hoy, los beneficios que provee Internet, al igual que nuestros derechos humanos tan costosamente logrados, únicamente pueden ser garantizados asegurando un acceso económico y ecuánime a la Internet, además de preservando su caracter abierto;

Considerando el papel único que los estándares abiertos y libres pueden jugar en asegurar este resultado, promoviendo la competencia y la innovación, reduciendo los precios y aumentando la capacidad de elección;

Considerando que los gobiernos, a través de su ejemplo y sus compras públicas, son los únicos capaces de asegurar que todas las personas alcancen los beneficios que los estándares digitales abiertos y libres pueden proveer;

Considerado que estos beneficios son de particular importancia para los pueblos económica, social y geográficamente desfavorecidos del mundo;

Considerando que hay un consenso creciente sobre las características de un estándar abierto y libre; Llamamos a todos los gobiernos a que:

1. Adquieran solo tecnologías informáticas que cumplan con los estándares abiertos y libres;
2. Provean servicios de e-gobierno basados exclusivamente en estándares abiertos y libres;
3. Usen solo estándares digitales abiertos y libres en sus propias actividades.
